English Language	Blogs: to improve your language	Bill Bryson: Mother Tongue	Lynne Truss: Eats, Shoots and Leaves.
	http://englishlangsfx.blogspot.co.uk	"A delightful survey - though with its good humour, wealth of anecdote, and boyish enthusiasm, "romp" would be a better word." (David Crystal)	"I laughed, I howled, and I immediately wanted to join the militant wing of the Apostrophe Society. This is great stuff:

			genuine, heartfelt and rousing.' Jenny Colgan http://dialectblog.com	Henry Hitchens: The Language Wars: A History of Proper English	Robert Lane Greene: You are what you Speak http://david-crystal.blogspot.co.uk	'It is a breath of fresh air (if that is the right cliché) to wander the byways of language without always being nudged to laugh at prescriptivists' foolish nostrums.' (Daily Telegraph)	"An insightful, accessible examination of the way in which day-to-day speech is tangled in a complicated web of history, politics, race, economics and power."
	http://linguistics-research-digest.blogspot.co.uk	Deborah Cameron: The Myth of Mars and Venus	David Marsh; For Who the Bell Tolls http://geoffbarton.co.uk/student-resources.php	"In this vigorously argued book, [Cameron] also combats the cliché by example, writing in an enjoyable mode of pugnacious sarcasm" (Steven Poole, The Guardian)	"an entertaining compendium of usage notes and essays. Most satisfying is an angry chapter on so-called "political correctness", which demolishes the pretensions of those who think they have a God-given right to abuse those less fortunate than themselves." (Steven Poole Guardian)
